

RACER

The image features a dark, textured background. At the top, the word "RACER" is written in a bold, gold-colored, sans-serif font. To the right of the word is a small, stylized illustration of a horse and jockey in gold. Below the word "RACER" is a large, stylized number "11" in the same gold color. The number is composed of thick vertical bars and horizontal crossbars, with a slightly distressed or aged appearance.

IN DEDICATION

To a man who has devoted himself to the young, inspired and instructed the membership of DECA, guided the Senior Class with wisdom and ardor.
A man who has given of himself
to his students—
To Mr. Robert Rucci
we dedicate PACER '69.

Remember this,
That here we were young.
When age beclouds us,
When the past recedes— too swiftly,
When a youth to us is young— not equal,
Remember.

The days pass slowly.

A student cherishes each one only when it is today;
most yesterdays are forgotten.

Some are not lost—
those days on which he is changed, and knows it, when something new happens or something familiar is seen in a new light.

So a year goes by;
the big days,
the ordinary days,
what he recalls and what he cannot.

He has grown.

The Year

September 4, 1968

The cycle begins again,
the first day.
Summer ends, while its warmth and sunshine linger on.
At ten-to-eight,
the doors open upon the familiar cool halls.
The rooms are clean,
voided of last year's personality.
The conversations written on the desks are gone—the battle between regulations and individual inspiration
is to be played again:
the first marks are made,
"J.C. Loves G.F."
"Homeroom period will be extended today . . ."
Streams of instructions, forms to be completed
until that changeless bell
sounds once more, and the corridors are again jammed with a jostling, noisy, flowing mass.
Books
are distributed, many already worn and scarred by others gone by; now our year-long possessions
by our names inscribed in them.
Teachers are ready to plunge right in,
to start the school year on the day it is scheduled to begin.
How they handle
this most delicate moment is a clue to their future behavior;
and is watched nervously by their students.
Far less personal, anticipated with resignation and futility, are the scheduling errors.
A senior in sophomore English, a chemistry student in physics. It seems everyone has a problem, and the lines grow longer,
seething with confusion, impatience, grumbling, laughter.
So again,
back in the groove.

PACER BOOSTER CAMPAIGN

September 9, Monday morning with a difference.

Red paper hearts adorn the corridors, amusing some, leaving others, as usual, bored.

Carefree posters proclaim "Pacer loves you."

P.A.'s remind Calhoun that the booster campaign has begun.

Dozens of booster sellers move out, cajoling, convincing, converting hundreds of students in homeroom, between classes, after school.

During lunch ("Come back when I've finished eating"), Barbara Rector, Karen Markwalter, Jan Schlesinger outsell everybody.

Red and white buttons abound until Wednesday the 18th when we put them aside—modest keepsakes.

"I bought a Pacer booster button today."

"Did that make you very happy?"

"Yes."

Ernie,
 Well another year
 is coming to a close.
 We now look back
 and smile with content.
 I hope you will always remember the fun times
 we had in the cafeteria.
 All the best for future years to come.

G.O. DRIVE

Homeroom representatives seek to persuade students in their homeroom each morning:

"A G.O. card gets you discounts at football games, dances, stores—you'll really save money. Just figure it this way . . ."

School spirit—G.O. supports all organizations, and only G.O. members are entitled to receive "Hoofbeats" (everyone gets a copy anyway).

At 8:10, the manila envelopes—with money and names—are returned to the Student Council office, and the next morning, the grey and black G.O. cards are ready. In two weeks, 51% of the students have their cards.

FOOTBALL BOOSTERS

"C'mon, don't you want to help support the senior class?"

"I don't have any money now."

"How about tomorrow?"

"Yeah, O.K. tomorrow . . ."

Another booster campaign.

Again a dollar.

A bright blue button

is offered, and sold to many.

Pocketbooks and clothing become vehicles of school spirit.

Also sold are the blue felt hats that those spirited few wear, perched jauntily on their heads at football games.

The first dance of the year and a poster contest,

The contest never generates much response but the dance is a success.

Its distinct images soon blur, leaving only a feeling of what it was like,

the dark,

the music—sometimes gentle,

sometimes harsh—

the people you danced with and began to know better, and the people you talked to.

A good night.

A good feeling.

The stiff competition of intramural basketball.
No spectators, but the joy of the game
is in its playing,
in individual satisfaction.

The FTA guides the parents on open school night.
"Yes dear, I met your teachers and they are very nice."

The construction of a house, a long, demanding job
requiring great skill.

A fire drill
(no talking on the way out) is nevertheless a time for socializing.
Much more pleasant than air raid drills when you kneel on the floor, scrunched up against the wall,
hands clamped behind your neck.

Calhoun loses by 105 points on its first TV appearance.

Its part of the audience is the most enthusiastic, loyal throughout.
The bus ride home is cheerful, the conversations lively.
Some disappointment but not much.

PEP RALLY

A means of intensifying school spirit.

"Give me a C!"

"C."

"Give me an A!"

"A."

Sometimes the spirit seems to be lacking. It is eighth period Friday, and the weekend looms larger and more inviting (and the minutes from 1:50 to 2:35 tick away so slowly). Thoughts are occasionally wandering elsewhere.

The cheerleaders whip up enthusiasm "Fite Team Fite."

The bleachers, jammed, throb with noise.

The drum rolls loudly as players run onto the middle of the floor.

The recognition gratifies all the squads, and especially psyches up the football team who play their first game the next day.

"Yay, team!"

Maybe it helps.

CROSS COUNTRY

Toe-touching, loosening up, running, they get ready; or they stand sweat-shirted, sweat-panted, talking quietly in small groups.
"Okay, strip down."

Together on the line, waiting.
"Go."

Runners move off in a pack, begin to string out.
Hundreds of yards away forty runners are a minute curved line moving slowly.

Salisbury Park is beautiful in early fall—quiet, peaceful There are only the muted cries of kids playing football, and the runners far away.
Once during the race, they return near the starting point to the ten or fifteen spectators, the managers and coaches.

The low-key excitement is now dramatic and personal.
"Come on, Larry."

"You better pass that guy."

Breathing heavily,
panting, sweating,
they keep on running.

Just as they ran in practice, long fatiguing afternoons of running, preparing themselves for 2-1/2 miles—13 minutes.

The leaders stride to the finish line to cheers and encouragement and triumph.
The others come in later,
more slowly, personally triumphant.

TENNIS

Also a sport of the individual, played not for public acclaim
but for personal satisfaction.
No spectators here—
maybe someone who was drifting by or a friend come to look for a while.
Alone on the court
facing an opponent.
They begin to volley,
the balls hard-white in their newness.
The customary racket flip—rough or smooth,
"I'll serve, taking some."
He takes some practice, then serves—throwing the ball high.
It reaches its peak, suspended motionless.
The racket whips down,
and the sound is satisfying, soft but explosive.
The return skims the net, skips sharply.

A quick step to the side.
Feel the racket as an extension of the arm.
Impact.
Charge to the net,
hope that he won't slam a backhand, angle a net shot.
Point— fifteen, love.
Stroke, knees bent, body moving into the ball.

The sweat begins to drip, and he wipes his dirt-sweaty palm on his shirt.
In two hours it's over.
Calhoun ends up with a 3-9 record.
The losses hurt, but then—there are the personal triumphs, the beauty of the sport.

FOOTBALL

"Dig in Calhoun, dig in."
 Cheerleaders on the sidelines. Anxious.
 Cal the Colt cavorts nearby.
 The worn green bleachers full of students in animated conversations or expectant, silent.
 The "huts" of the quarterback cut the fall air.

The offense plays a running game—crashing through the middle, or sweeping around the end.
 Running hard, cleats
 tearing up the sod.
 Sometimes the quarterback keeps and fades for a pass.

The bench stands and shouts rhythmically, gutturally,
"Go, Go, Go, Go."

A bomb spirals downfield, inches beyond the receiver's straining fingertips.
A long, bruising drive is halted at the three yard line.
A red flag floats
gently to earth.
Agony.

A halftime show—the brassy, tuneful sound of the marching band;
the rhythmic kicks and sways of the Prancers.

Action explodes
in a burst of sudden speed, the clatter of collisions, a brutal tackle—
a halfback upended, sent sprawling, stunned.

The P.A. announces the tackler and the tackled,
and the yardage gained.
Removed from the excitement, senior sales sells hot dogs
and Cokes.

A traditional rivalry, Mephram-Calhoun, played on a bitter cold rainy afternoon, ended in defeat.
A newly hatched Calhoun-Kennedy rivalry is just as intense.
Calhoun falters.

Anguish
on the faces of the cheerleaders reveals
the outcome more eloquently than the scoreboard can.

It's a vulnerable piece of cloth and the market is filled with it.
Larry Koch
died
for it this year.
Joe Simone did too,
two years ago.
The P.A. clicked on,
"This is Mr. Jordan . . ."
Very quiet.

He was serious and hurt and you couldn't understand what was going on.
He was speaking, and when he was done, you began to know what Vietnam was.
Everyone was a little shocked
in homeroom that morning.
They honored
Joe Simone
with a plaque on the wall near the gym and they named a trophy for him.
"This is Mr. Jordan . . ."
again and again . . .
a 1966 graduate of Calhoun—

a 1965 graduate—
a fine student—
a great athlete—shot
or blown up.

There is a plaque in the main foyer with 15 brass plates.
They added
Larry Koch's name
to that list this year.
There are 4 spaces more and maybe in a while there won't be any.

Not too many kids notice it now—maybe it will attract attention when it is full—gold with deaths,
or maybe when there are two plaques—maybe after two.

Twenty years
is a short time to be, especially if you expect to be around for another fifty or sixty.

COMPUTER DANCE

Tickets are off-white oblong cards with little holes and a magic marker number. There is a form to answer, and you stand at a table facing the cafeterias, trying to be honest with yourself, deciding whether to be literally truthful or to respond with an optimistic slant. Say more than one date a week just to be on the safe side—sometimes describing what should be, not what is. The computer works at creating love. Each boy and girl gets four numbers; anxious but lighthearted, they realize that the final choice was not theirs, but a machine's in Rockville Centre. Boy meets girl has succumbed to automation and both are wary— but hopeful.

Traditionally the pursuer— boys, searching, and now also searched for, wander through the darkness which is sporadically illuminated by the pulse of the strobes. The girls are lined up on one side, boys on the other. Names and numbers are read off. Some unions are achieved— only to be hastily broken. Some never even reach that stage, finding less success now than with the old way. But some are harmony and love, and the dancing and the night are only a prelude. Music floods out the disappointment of mismatches; it also heightens the beauty, the joy of finding someone. And the strobes and the darkness intermingle. The usual and the different sensations blend in a new experience. Which is not so new, but only a variation of a timeless theme.

Food glorious food.

The Key Club breakfast serves three hundred,
who, hungry for the fresh rolls and bagels, begin trickling in at 6:45, and soon
fill the cafeteria, shouting, talking, laughing, and always eating.

It sure beats Rice Krispies . . .

Long hours of soccer practice begin early in the season.

Jaki Dear is the first Calhoun student to vie for the Miss Teenage America crown.
Her beauty and her charm bring her to the semifinals of the Miss Teenage Long Island contest.

Walking through the halls after school you see someone munching
a soft, rich fudge brownie.
And you're drawn to the service club cake sale
in the gym lobby
where the bartering begins,
"You can have this one for three cents because it's a little burnt."

Halloween,
and you remember when you were a little kid who'd come home from trick-or-treating with lots of candy,
and some pennies
(from people who just didn't understand) and you'd look at the funny jack o' lantern that you helped to make.
Our pleasures have changed.
Those days are gone.

Jacob Gunther,
a man with a deep interest in this school
and its youth, visits Calhoun and presents the choir with flowers.

GYMNASTICS

They warm up before a meet, casually performing feats astonishing to the onlookers.

They become tense, but quietly confident as the meet begins.

Each event is an exhibition of strength and coordination and training.

A rope climber,
arms straining, pulls himself to the top.

The grace and beauty of floor exercise—handstands, arches.

All movements, very quiet, with a light touch;
this mood broken by a burst

of handsprings catapulting the gymnast the length of the mat.

A high bar expert is for one timeless instant suspended, motionless, his body vertical above the bar
at the top of his arc.

There is camaraderie between two gymnasts who walk off together, talking, comparing.

A short wait.
that seems long— the judges tabulate their decisions.

A win. Calhoun—
first in its division,
second in the SSAL playoffs.

This is what the practices were for.
This, the result
of striving and dedication.

GIRLS' FALL SPORTS

Bloomered in grey,
laughing and cheering,
every period and after school,
girls are in the gym,
the foyer,
on the fields.
Balls flying . . .
rackets sweeping.
Dig!

Don't be afraid of the ball,
it doesn't bite!
Watch those sticks.
Score of love-love.

The Dads join in the fun
one evening,
taken from their sedentary lives into a world of physical exertion . . .

Cage ball, tug-of-war, relay races.
Ball between the knees, hopping . . . the ball squirts out,
is retrieved,
drops to the floor

again. The father turns back.
Giggling and screaming and
"Oh, Dad's"

fade into the general uproar, the excitement,
the continuous activity.
The break at nine o'clock,
a welcome rest,
to drink cider,
cool—

to joke about the events.

There is a warmth
between a daughter, now striking out on her own more often,
and her father;
for tonight,
it is as it was.

DECA, to guide the young toward careers in marketing and distribution, through competition and projects. DECA week, November 10-15, informs the school of their activities.

Another assembly with a serious purpose. Many seniors have Snoopy dolls now—because many families have magazine subscriptions.

The mock election—out of Social Studies class for ten minutes.

Pull the lever over until you hear it click.

Nixon, 431,

Humphrey, 419; Wallace, 271.

136 students, carrying shopping bags with bread, walk from door to door one Sunday afternoon, collecting dimes and quarters and dollars; The March of Dimes Bread Drive.

Assemblies enhance a school day. You leave your books in the classroom, stroll, unencumbered, into the cool of the auditorium, ease into a soft red seat, and relax for a while, almost forgetting that this is school.

An oasis.

Draft counseling at the annual military assembly.

"Beat the draft," the noncom says. "Enlist."

SENIOR PLAY—

"THE WORLD of SHOLOM ALEICHEM"

Rehearsals for a month
and a performance of two hours.
Students transformed
by skillful direction and cosmetic artistry into other people of other times, facing changeless problems.

Sholom Aleichem. It was wise.
Aleichem Sholom. It was funny.
Nu, it was both—from Mendeley's stroll down the aisle with his book-filled baby carriage, until the final applause at 10:30.

Chelm.

A dog wags his tail because he is stronger than the tail, not the other way around—ah, the wisdom of Rabbi David.

If a melamed of Chelm can't figure out why his she goat is a he goat, Rabbi David can.
Bontche Schweig
silent, suffering,
is admitted to heaven.

A compassionate Defending Angel pleads his case.
A scowling Prosecuting Angel is speechless.
And Bontche asks only for a hot roll with fresh butter.

Gymnasium— the High School.
A Jewish boy,
not as silent but also suffering,
is not admitted into the High School.
A dark contrast.
The struggle against bigotry revealed in thirty agonizing minutes.
The possibility of brotherhood affirmed.
So enjoy, the playwright says,
but remember.

SOCCKER

A sparse crowd cheers for eleven players who have practiced and scrimmaged
together for months, and become a championship club.
They do not play the game
for its glory,
for personal stardom,
but as members of a team.
On the field, they move relentlessly, passing the ball with low, hard kicks, or dribbling cautiously until—the satisfying thud
of shoe against ball
sends it soaring toward the goal.
Fierce scrambling action in these moments wins or loses a game.
The ball hurtles into the goal and the offense feels a whooping, back-slapping joy.

Just as tenacious on defense, in man-to-man battles
for ball control;
they struggle for possession.
The final barrier,
the goalie, blocks the ball
at all costs, often leaving his feet in a desperate lunge.
Undefeated Calhoun takes the division title.

Two players—Dennis Carlson, Ken Supple make the All-County team.
Coach Mills is honored by his boys;
the climax of a difficult season,
personal successes accompanying the selflessness that leads a team to victory.

WMCA GOOD GUY DANCE

The Wednesday before Thanksgiving, a day of idleness, happiness, eager anticipation of the dance that night.
Strobes and colored lights bathe the gym,
sawdust strewn on the floor, nine hundred students having a blast.

Ed Baer brings the spirit and sound of WMCA.

This is the tradition that began when these seniors were sophomores,
that in three years has become an annual event.

The hard rock beat
of four bands—the Revelations, Koala, Cream of Wheat,
Derek.

"Cinnamon, let me in."

The music a piercing intensity
drowning out conversation,
"I can't hear you!"
"What?"

There is always dancing, a loose, individual expression of emotions;
being transported
with the music into a satisfaction of moving,
of being here and doing just this.

The loudness tempered by several slow dances, oases of quiet and softness.

The hall outside provides refreshment, and cool air;
relief from the heat within,
a respite from the swaying, joyful abandon.

Two former drug addicts describe themselves—the pain and sorrow of their experience—and counsel against getting hooked.

Cap and gown measurements remind you that June is closer than you realize. This brief process leads to thoughts of graduation and beyond.

The Red Cross Drive,
five minutes a day
in homeroom
for one week,
channels Calhoun quarters and nickels into a worldwide organization that aids those in need.
We are comfortable,
so we give.

The induction into National Honor Society, to the gentle strains of Simon and Garfunkel, produces the annual tension and relief, the outbursts of clapping, ("Please withhold your applause until all the names have been read"—Mr. Jordan) and for 26 students,
the long walk to the stage.

Juniors
order Senior rings.
They are almost seniors now,— a time for anticipation and reflection.

Seniors receive the results of the SAT's.
This may determine a college acceptance—or rejection.
A tense moment,
a prayer,
as each senior reads his scores.

Beauty Culture students observe, then perform—learning the art of beauty in high school, for a career upon graduation.

The future beckons.

The first snow,
a light dusting that transforms a cold December into a beautiful one.
White flakes unexpectedly drift from the sky, gently swirled by the wind.
"Is it sticking?"
"Think we'll have school tomorrow?"
Attention is diverted from the classroom to the snow, to the promise of winter.

There is a Christmas lunch, complete with a chocolate Santa Claus for dessert.
Now as deadlines approach, seniors struggle with the essays on their college applications.
Weeks of rehearsal for the Winter Concert culminate in a magnificent performance on Thursday evening, December 22.
The next day, the Friday before the Christmas vacation, classes are deserted; by seventh period, dozens of students begin to wander home;
others remain in the party in the PACER office, or at the CAAVA party after school.
The anticipation, the relief, the confusion of the day;
the giddiness of being in school and doing nothing—
the Christmas spirit reigns.

Ten days of late nights, late mornings, long sprawling afternoons of usually spontaneous activity.
1968 becomes 1969.

January 2—
students, now unused to school, regretfully arise at seven and return, to wait in homerooms for half an hour as the enormous attendance line in the auditorium is slowly processed.
Soon, midterms. Teachers review in class.
For the seniors, these are the final hurdles.

It is winter,
months of activity amidst snowy beauty.

WINTER CONCERT

The Christmas spirit permeates the overflowing auditorium.
The Glee Clubs open the evening, the boys singing of a Coney Island Baby,
the girls creating a haunting echo.
The strings,
in their second Winter Concert, provide a selection of classics.
Memories of hours of practice fade
as the applause swells.
The powerful notes of the band,
under a new director,
resound through the auditorium.
The power and depth of the choir climax Calhoun's Eleventh Annual Winter Concert.
Five golden rings
and eleven pipers piping,
"The Little Drummer Boy", continue on with tradition.
One hundred and twenty-five Calhoun grads—bearded, married, with children of their own—pay tribute to Mr. Thayer.
Hallelujah!
brings the audience to its feet.
Created is the most beautiful feeling Calhoun will ever know.

Both the Boys' and the Girls' Bowling Teams constantly improve their skills.
Their studious concentration as they stand at the line only heightens the satisfaction of hearing the clattering of falling pins.

The girls are enthusiastic and surprisingly skillful—Girls' Basketball
is a fast-paced game.

The rifle range underneath the first floor is strewn with empty cartridges.
Here, the Rifle Team practices—with sharp eyes and steady hands, rifles nestled in their shoulders, they slowly squeeze the triggers . . .

BASKETBALL

They pass back and forth—
a short, hard chest pass, from Tully to Thomas,
a bounce pass angling off the hard, polished wood.

They shift, fake,
trying to work the ball inside.

A momentary break allows a twenty-foot jumper, Paul Groul;
it arches high, and in sudden silence, swishes through the net.

Two points
flash onto the newly-installed scoreboard.

The other team brings the ball up to midcourt and soon Calhoun's cheerleaders are shouting—
"Hey, hey; take, take it; take it away!"

Calhoun presses and forces a hurried shot that bounces off the rim.

Four men go up for it in a rough jostling of knees and elbows, and Jim Cutrone pulls it in.

At the half-time buzzer, the crowd buys candy and cokes from Senior Sales.
The teams, hot and flushed, retire to the locker rooms,
and return refreshed.

The exhausting pace continues, broken only by a few time-outs and fouls.

Their tiredness is stripped away by a shot so sure it
whips through the cords, a crucial, jamming stuff—the unity of five players who are a smoothly-coordinated whole.

GIRLS' VOLLEYBALL

A cluster of uplifted faces watching with intensity; eyes riveted on the ball as it is served, slapped, and tapped back and forth
 with increased momentum.
 Breaths held; then a chorus of cheers reverberating through the gym, echoing the enthusiasm reflected on the faces.

INDOOR TRACK

"On your marks. Get set."

Acrid smell of spent gunpowder hangs in the air. The report of the starter's gun lost in the noise and confusion.

High jumpers

arch over the bar, and nearby, shotputters heave a sixteen pound ball.

A seemingly unorganized mass of teams and spectators. The runners burst from the lines; the sprinters alone, and soon each races through the open gym door into the cold, his time recorded; long-distance runners in a group, a sustained, competitive exhaustion.

A supreme effort in the final laps—overcoming the fatigue and pouring it on, each runner measuring himself against the clock, the others, himself.

WRESTLING

Arms loose at their sides, they circle each other,
moving easily,
feinting,
searching for an opening.
"Shoot in!"

A lightning thrust, and now, down on the mat,
thrashing wildly, they roll beyond the gray circle.
The whistle shrilly halts the match. Referee's position.
A reversal. Then, deadlocked, straining without effect for long seconds,
motionless in a tiring struggle.
The ref on his knees, palm raised.
The stands, the other wrestlers, shouting, pleading.

The hand strikes the mat,
a short, loud slap.
A pin. A handshake.

An arm raised in victory—
Gary Wagner puts Calhoun over the top in a cliffhanger with Freeport.
Calhoun, long a wrestling power, is third in the SSAL's this year, 4-1 in league play,
and defeats Mephram 24-19.

Success is the result of individual effort, of dedicated guidance by Coach Bury and Coach Gold.
Twelve matches, each pairing two athletes, who are bolstered by encouragement and advice from the crowd—
"Do something, Tim . . ." Yet these athletes are, in the midst of this screaming crowd, alone.

A time for silence.
For solitude.
The need to think—
of the good times,
of the bad,
of yourself.
Of being young
and in love,
or out of it.
Of achieving and failing.
The need to dream—
of next weekend, next month, next year;
to right the mistakes
you have made,
never to repeat them;
to do what you have wanted to do
but never have.
The need to wonder.

Juniors are introduced to the nerve-wracking rigors of college admissions. The March SAT's—data sufficiency problems, reading comprehensions, antonyms . . .
 "Make sure all marks are heavy and dark. Erase completely. Any stray marks may be read as intended answers."

Eighty-six couples attend the Winter Ball, dancing to the loud soul beat of "The Best of Both Worlds" or just digging the music while sitting at the tables. The atmosphere is highlighted by the flashing multi-colored lights and the spiffy paper daisy centerpieces.

Seniors spend one October day in homeroom taking the 300 question Regents Scholarship exam. In early February, the cut-off score is announced; 38 students receive manila envelopes in the mail that bear their scholarship certificates.

Loris, our NCCJ exchange student from Argentina, becomes the "brother" of Richard Sussman for two months.

Diane Kassover hosts Azeb, the World Youth Forum student from Ethiopia. Calhoun students learn from Loris and Azeb, and many find them good friends—thereby learning the most important lesson of exchange programs.

Students seek knowledge, but grades are also important. Mark cards and report cards every six weeks occasion strong emotions—
 "My test average is higher than that!"
 or "What am I going to tell my parents?"

POP CONCERT

"Good evening. This is Nina Feldman"—
 "and Gary Lewi"—
 "introducing the 1969 Calhoun Pop Concert."
 "Mr. Lagueux, our new band director"— "who is not to be held responsible for anything we might say this evening"—
 "has directed the entire program."
 Their running dialogue is sardonic—
 "Trip it away Pat . . .
 And she probably will."
 sexy ("What body.") and funny.

The evening is a conglomeration of moods—the brassy sound of the dance band, the thinly-veiled grossness of the Jug Band, the contemporary styles of the fashion show ("Can you see someone wearing one of those?") the subdued artistry of a piano solo. Martha Harlam's mike comes on "Just in Time", and her effortless recovery draws applause from the Friday night audience. Her rich, expressive voice contrasts with the ribald "Doing What Comes Naturally" and the Boys' Octet's mock-serious "Rigoletto", replete with sight gags like a rubber duck.

"You dumb kite-eating tree!" . . .
 The hilarious pathos of Charlie Brown.
 The moving "Those Were the Days", sung sweetly by Sue Kleiner.
 The concert rises to a climax with the frantic show-stopping "Officer Krupke", 17 girls cavorting, laughing, singing, and transforming the stage into a vibrant, light-hearted street scene, because "No-one wants a kid who's got a social disease!"
 Suddenly, the two main aisles stream with kids running at full-speed, trying unsuccessfully to hold hands, and singing "There's no business like show business".
 Now 200 performers are massed on the stage, belting out the finale.

FACULTY PLAY—"GUYS and DOLLS"

Sixty-five teachers make history March 14 and 15 with Calhoun's first faculty show (a reserved seat performance). "Guys and Dolls", a fast-paced, tuneful musical, tells of the fourteen-year engagement between a nasal showgirl, Adelaide (Miss Meistrell), and Nathan Detroit (Mr. Schweisguth), the proprietor of "the oldest established, permanent floating crap game in New York". Another romance is the wooing of prissy Sarah Brown, the Salvation Army girl, (convincingly played by Mrs. Guido) by Sky Masterson (Mr. Ryan), a sky's-the-limit gambler. The affair arises strictly as a business proposition, a bet between Nathan and Sky; but following several quarrels, some drunken hanky-panky in Cuba, and Sky's honoring of his marker—"to deliver one dozen sinners" to the usually empty mission, Sky and Sarah find themselves in love. The rousing finale is the double wedding of Nathan and Adelaide (at last), and Sky and Sarah. Mr. Jordan as the unseen Joey Biltmore (in a role reminiscent of his P.A. announcements), Mr. Schick as Liver-Lips Louie, and Mr. Coby typecast as a cop play memorable bit parts. Sometimes voices crack, and a note is flat, sometimes a line is muffed, but the exuberance of the teachers prevail. The rollicking songs include Nicely-Nicely Johnson's (Mr. Lawrence) "Sit Down You're Rocking the Boat," and Adelaide's plaintive "Take Back Your Mink." The joyously imprecise chorus line, the Chaplinesque mugging of Mr. Schweisguth, the skilled orchestra . . . further elements of an entertaining, whimsical evening that brings the students to their feet in affection and appreciation.

The necessities of printing prevent a yearbook's record from describing the final months of school, the months of spring.

The snow melts, and after some false starts the sun comes out to stay.

It is green and warm outside, and inviting.

Who can resist going out to lunch, even if you don't have lunch scheduled?

So much happens now . . .

the Blue-Grey rivalry of Sportsnight, created during weeks of practices and climaxed during one noisy exciting night;
varsity competition in baseball and track;
the Scholarship Drive on a Saturday afternoon, a Calhoun-Mephram-Kennedy effort in which hundreds solicit door-to-door, and thousands give;
the Senior Prom at Malibu, an elegant evening of dining and dancing,

of girls more beautiful in their formals than they have ever been,

of boys tuxedoed, many for the first time;
finals, on those mimeographed pages;

Regents in their individual envelopes;

a time afterwards to compare answers, to hope for the best,
and to celebrate the end of the year.

Graduation, a long-awaited day, is a solemn ceremony of speeches and awarding of diplomas, until the exultant seniors,

hurl their caps high.

So ends high school.

The year is more than its highlights,
more than the memorable occasions.
It is a succession of incidents all but unnoticed.
It is a personal ten months, impressions
culled from everyday experiences, the recurring routine
of classes, lunches, walking in the halls;
the simple daily moments of school.

The following pages capture these moments.

A class period is schoolwork—you take notes (sadly unorganized) as a teacher lectures;
 ask a question that everybody hoped someone would ask; and raise your hand
 because this time
 you know the answer.
 It is slipping off
 into a daydream of beauty, of being very happy until you realize that you have missed five minutes of class;
 whispering a hilarious aside to a friend;
 leaving a message on a desk.
 The minutes,
 so far apart,
 tick away slowly.
 The bell rings, and notebooks close. But education continues in extra help after school,
 a talk in the hall.
 So grows a better understanding of the subject, of the teacher.
 And you
 learn from the person,
 not the figure.

Connected by but
one hall,
the academic and vocational wings are tenuously linked physically and emotionally.
Acquaintances are infrequent, friendships rare;
for each student prefers to remain within his own group, blinded
by the surface and not knowing or not caring that he and
"the others"
are often alike.

To set the spark for a blazing white heat for welding.

To be an artist,
a worker in ceramics,
to shape and paint and fire.
To understand and work with the intricacies of an automobile engine.

To master
the precise circuitry of a radio.

To feel the rough edge of the wood, now only a half-cut plank,
soon part of a house.

To view a chair,
yours
and completed at last.
Experiences that come only from work and dedication, these are the triumphs—
the joy—of skill.

Erne
 I wish you a very happy future in life and I will always remember you best from church and at C.H.S. 69.
 Eric - Sterling

Engine lathes and drill presses in the machine shop require careful operation. Here an opportunity to learn the processes and construction of machines.

Typesetting is only part of the Printing course, an exploration of the graphic arts including silk screen, rubber stamps, linoleum blocks.

During an instrumentation class, students ponder electrical equations, principles upon which their lab work is based.

Electric laboratory, a study of machines and electronics, ranging from testing a motor to repairing a pole lamp.

Beauty culture students apply their skill on Public Day. Novices, they are interested and concerned—and their customers are satisfied. A dollar for a wash and set.

The vocational courses combine the work of the mind with the work of the hands, providing applications of theories and equations, transforming instructions on paper into action and creation.

Simulators
add a different aspect to driver ed.
Being instructed by a film—driving without moving is a unique experience.

Finally, the ability to make
K-turns and to park parallel is achieved.

A road test—sometimes two or three—represents freedom to seniors.

There are some classes in the academic wing that are more than lectures and note-taking, classes of physical activity.

Open windows in mid-December air the room of the smell of rotten eggs.

Amateur scientists, looking professional in goggles and aprons attempt to concentrate in spite of the stink.

Weighing, measuring,
heating, cooling, observing,
preparing for another try.

The constant clack of the typewriters resounds through the corridors as the students race against the timer,
trying to keep their eyes off the keyboards
and direct their fingers to the right keys.

Rolls and muffins
baking in the home economics room, mouths watering in the halls outside.

Mechanical drawing demands a steady hand, a sure eye—
the result, an accurate diagram.

The art classes,
students doing their own thing—painting on canvas, etching in metal, chipping stone, designing labels.
In a world of their own, presenting what they think, feel and see for others to experience.

The perfect note
gently floats.
A discordant note
sinks.
A harsh command
sharply silences.
A sigh, a deep breath constant repetition.
The sounds of creation—long, hard hours—
echo.

Sit-ups:
 forty faces strained
 with fatigue.
 Endless jumping jacks:
 weary sighs
 float through the gym.
 Hockey, Volleyball, basketball, dancing;
 laughter and voices
 rise above the background music provided by a record player, until they are stilled by the shrill sound of a whistle.
 Then a frenzied scramble to the locker room.

After slamming your books
onto the top of the dented metal lockers, you change into gray gym gear, standing barefoot on the tile floor (cold in winter).

Then, out into the gym or down to the hot wrestling room
to wait for five minutes.

"Fall in, gentlemen . . . Double-arm interval. Dress right, dress!"

Jumping jacks; situps; pushups—down one, down two, down twenty-five (the pushup has become a twitch of the arm).

The athletics are noisy, and good-natured despite the clumsiness shown on the apparatus, and the foul-ridden basketball game between skins and shirts.

Hot and sweaty,
you return to the locker room, shower (maybe), change into street clothes, and hair neatly combed, return to the classroom.

Each student eats
at his own table every day.
Few move from one
table to another and rarer is he who changes cafeterias.
The student comes to know the teacher on duty that period who often reminds him—
"Take your tray."
He might even come to know his chair or his table, for some have distinctive characteristics—a witty saying penned on a table
or a chair that is unevenly balanced.
Most of all, he comes to know those with whom he eats.
He relaxes, and jokes or perhaps talks seriously for forty-five minutes.
Sometimes there is homework to be done.
With all this, food is almost a minor consideration.
Almost—but when one of his favorites (spaghetti, turkey, roast beef) is served,
that surely makes his day
a little brighter.

Sometimes,
out of haste or happiness,
you run through the halls.
Even when you walk,
four minutes is plenty of time between classes. The stuffy clogging
on the stairs and the bottlenecks in the halls are just daily facts of life.
What relief to walk into the hall outside Room 322, nearly deserted,
very quiet, the sun
slanting in
on beams of dust.
If you wander around
during a class,
any hall is peaceful.
After school, too, on the second and third floors.
Walking hand in hand, or alone, thinking, is a peaceful feeling.
The first floor is more crowded—
a line at the phone booth, especially on rainy days;
groups talking,
doing homework,
much easier done together.
The halls are more than a means of transit.

The beauty of the main foyer is not in the passing, but in the staying.

Many walk through it every day, after school many leave by its doors. But some remain for a while. It is a simple place—there is a design on the floor which few ever notice, a Vietnam memorial plaque, a showcase.

The courtyard is behind it. What is important here is not the scenery but the people.

There is a place to sit with a friend.

Those who come alone in search of privacy often find someone they know.

Others come in pairs or threes wanting to spend a couple of minutes talking, to find out what has happened during the day, to exchange ideas, and to laugh about it all. The main foyer is a great place to get together with people.

Once there was a dress code.
But now . . .

The boys go hairy.
Long hair
sweeping down over their foreheads—creeping down their cheeks into bushy sideburns.
Some begin the painstaking cultivation of a beard;
the daily barely noticeable stubble grows into hirsute luxuriance.
Several teachers sport mustaches.
Soon some students
cease shaving their upper lips.

One girl with cold legs wears pants—and spends some time in the Main Office.
But her defiance of tradition paves the way—
"On Monday we'll all wear pants." This spirit of change is countered in two first-period assemblies, then reluctantly accepted.
Bellbottoms and dungarees—worn by both boys and girls—abound, and naturally, so do miniskirts.
Ahh, miniskirts.

Mark Jarrett presides over Student Council meetings in the Little Theatre on Monday afternoons.

Sometimes a quorum is not achieved but there are usually lively (heated) discussions.

"I'll do his head."

The ten minute pattern—
if Tommy cries, rub his back gently . . .
The crawling across the living room floor—
"Push, Tom," and you push his feet, left, right, left, right.

A beautiful feeling when he crawls well, or laughs.

A warm half hour each week in the Carroll home.

The service club members are a part of the 150 volunteers—who care.

Library Club members perform the duties of all librarians—shelving books, stamping books to be taken out, and collecting fines (even from friends).

Leader Corps members, whose job consists primarily of taking attendance, leading calisthenics, and demonstrating various skills, instruct intent sophomores
in the ever-popular "Alley Cat".

In the enclave that is the PACER office, there is a spirit borne of months of working together and completing deadlines together.

The editors are concerned with the details of each page in the yearbook,
a product of photography, writing, layout, editing, and administrative and creative talent.
As in the theme of the booster campaign, this is a labor of love.

A typical Math meet with only two seconds, one second—you've almost got the . . .
Time's up. Pencils down—(scribble anything now) .
A minute of silent, nervous anticipation until "The answer is . . . 23, 59, 87, or ill-defined."
"I got it!" "What a guess!"
A feeble "Why didn't I think of that?"

The A.V. Squad member enters greeted by a chorus of cheers.
Blinds are drawn, lights are flicked off,
the projector whirs:
a film is a rare treat.

The Hoofbeats editors scan their paper,
just delivered to the school.
Soon, it will be distributed in homerooms, carried all day, and read whenever possible.
Uncensored this year, it is truly
"The Voice of Calhoun."

Debaters research thoroughly, spending Saturdays in the Freeport library, preparing file boxes filled with 3x5's.
They study and practice the methods of cross-examination;
lawyers probing for weaknesses in a case, logical, aggressive, skeptical.

At a JETS meeting,
a member raises a question—maybe about the workings of an oscilloscope or a gyroscope or the use of a laser.
Suggestions are proposed, carefully considered.
From this give and take, a solution is reached.

Senior Planning guides the affairs of the Senior Class.
Informal, often inconclusive discussions center about the Senior Prom; ideas are proposed, rejected;
progress is made.

Hidden beneath the stage is the musty hideout and storeroom of the Drama Club, its walls splashed with graffiti—here, many students leave their marks, the heritage of past plays and players.
In the long months between performances,
a dark silent aura prevails,
and settles on the table tops and artificial flowers.

The girls of F.N.A.
(Future Nurses of America)
weigh and measure students.

CAAVA, the Calhoun Association for the Advancement of the Visual Arts. is at home in the Art Room amidst the splattered benches and tables, the distinctive fragrance of paint, acid, and clay.
Their purpose, art—
creating the backdrop for the Pop Concert; painting the still life they made from a baby carriage, a car, a tuba.

The FTA helps a needy school in Kentucky by collecting books and supplies.
The girls also help teachers at Calhoun.

In the quiet of the library, the Chess Club meets ("I'll play you . . . " Okay".) to polish their games.
The atmosphere is friendly but intense.

The P.A. each morning—clicks and scratches precede
"Your attention, please" and the Pledge of Allegiance.
Then, five minutes of club announcements, names of students (to report to various places around the school), and random reminders.

The Bookkeeping Club sells tickets for the Pop Concert, putting into practice
the methods of care and accuracy they have learned during class.

The green blackboards are wiped clean,
the bulletin boards are bare, bulky masses of white looseleaf paper (class notes)
have been filed or discarded;
the tangible legacy of the year disappeared so soon.

It has been recorded only in our minds that there was no afternoon homeroom this year,
"Hey Jude" from the Beatles was Number One for months, and girls' sports were almost eliminated by the gym teachers' wage dispute.

Kornblum's harangue,
an angry five-minute P.A. announcement, attempted to stimulate lagging G.O. sales;
the ringing of the fire alarms after school became routine—false alarms; and you got out of gym to listen to high and low frequency beeps—a hearing test.

An unprecedented six day weekend was created by three snow days (15 inches of snow) and Lincoln's Birthday, and Mr. Jordan announced that there would be no throwing of snowballs on school property.

No longer important are the two disputed points on a test, the momentary difficulty of trying to open the Regents Scholarship Test booklet with the eraser end of your pencil.

The perspective changes, and a mosaic but complete image of the year is formed.

The school is now
silent and dark,
the halls and rooms
strangely empty.
June 1969.

Teachers leave their marks
in odd ways,
in a gesture or an expression that has become a byword, a bond
between them and their students.
Instruction is personal,
an interaction that has extended beyond a class period
to the after-school hours, to conversations in the halls.
Finally, there is success—in linking what is known with what can be discovered, initiating a sense of the future
in those who will be living it.

Confident
in the familiarity of his role as a student.
Yet unsure,
for he looks forward and cannot understand what his life will demand of him, nor what he will be able to give.
He is confused, but he learns.

Ernie, I'm sorry I broke your CP set. I hate C and Sanders, because I'm on a Good Luck list

Ernie, I'm sorry I broke your CP set. I hate C and Sanders, because I'm on a Good Luck list

Ernie, with a little bit of soul Hunter will be hip but what the hell he isn't. Good Luck to you in future life.
Ernie, An Electrical Genius, A Graduate - maybe A Great Guy - Yes Karl
Ernie, I'm sorry I broke your CP set. I hate C and Sanders, because I'm on a Good Luck list

One who chooses to try himself,
to develop and
to be challenged.
To find fulfillment
in being satisfied with what he has done,
or with his attempt
to do it.
To feel pain in failing.
So it is with
he who is not content with himself, but needs to move on.
Such is the pleasure of youth.

Those who care enough about the young
to help them keep their remembrances
by giving their support.
A generation, which is reminded of the past,
is moved, and understands the importance of what has gone by.

The Year 8-101

All during the school year,
you look forward to June.
Then, when it finally arrives, and you're really happy that you made it and summer is here,
you look back, to recall the past ten months.

"I got a 90!"
"I didn't know this was due today."
The feeling of school never leaves you.
The nights of undone homework and guilty mornings of hoping it isn't collected.
Weekend homework which isn't completed until Sunday evening.
The pressure of last-minute work becomes routine.
"Mike, let me borrow your lab this period."

The mood of school isn't only in schoolwork.
It's in waking up Monday morning to reluctantly face another long five days of school;
in a teacher's absence—
"Does the sub make you work?"; in the lunches—
the good days, and the days when there aren't even any sandwiches that you like;
in the third lap of the track at 6:32
when the coach yells "If you don't do it under 7:00, you have to run it till you do."
It is also passing your road test at last,
or getting into college (your mother rushes to school to tell you)—and being congratulated by all your friends.

*Once, it's been great knowing
you in the past year in school and S.S. Don't forget that summer retreat (and I wish you were here of luck in the future and may the Lord bless you throughout W. Bob*

Friends—it is the students who make the year, the kids in your classes and the ones you eat lunch with, someone you have a crush on or who has a crush on you,
the crowds in the halls.

The fragmentary recollections and the bits and pieces of conversations months old—
"What'd you do this weekend?"
"Buzzy Berg had this book before me"— this is the year that has passed and been lost.
You think about it,
how your life is going and where it's going to,
where you were in September and where you are now.
It's been a good year.

Youth will pass us by one day, and not understand
that we, too, were once young.
Remember, when others cannot,
these joys that seem so lasting now.
Remember—
